

Little Money Explorers — Book 1

My First Money Adventure

Written by Dr. Vijaya Dutta

Illustrated by [Illustrator name — to be added]

My First Money Adventure
Little Money Explorers — Book 1

Text copyright © 2026 Dr. Vijaya Dutta
Illustrations copyright © 2026 [Illustrator name]

All rights reserved. No part of this book may be reproduced, stored, or transmitted in any form without written permission from the copyright holder, except for brief quotations used in reviews.

This is a work of fiction. Any resemblance to real persons is coincidental.

Recommended for ages 3–5.
First Edition, 2026.

Also in this series: My First Coin Adventure (Book 2)

For every child learning that the world runs on kindness — and every grown-up who shows them how.

ILLUSTRATION PLACEHOLDER

Milu wakes up in her sunlit bedroom, Pico beside her on the bed.

Milu loved mornings best. Sunlight danced on her windowsill, and her best friend Pico waited on her bed, wings fluttering, ready for whatever adventure today might bring.

ILLUSTRATION PLACEHOLDER

Close-up of Pico mid-giggle on Milu's shoulder.

Pico was not quite a bird and not quite a toy — a fluffy little sky-blue friend who giggled, hummed, and always noticed things Milu almost missed.

ILLUSTRATION PLACEHOLDER

Milu reaches under the sofa; golden light spills out.

While hunting for a lost puzzle piece under the sofa, Milu's fingers touched something small, round, and warm. It wasn't a puzzle piece. It was a glowing golden coin.

ILLUSTRATION PLACEHOLDER

Milu holds the glowing coin as a golden portal opens.

The coin trembled in her palm, humming a soft golden tune. Pico gasped. Light spilled from its edges, swirling into a shimmering doorway right there in the living room.

ILLUSTRATION PLACEHOLDER

Milu and Pico swirl into golden light near a kitchen table with fresh bread.

“Where does bread even come from?” Pico wondered aloud, pointing at the warm loaf on the table. The coin flared bright gold and pulled them gently through the light.

ILLUSTRATION PLACEHOLDER

Farmer Ravi waves from a golden wheat field at sunrise.

They landed in a field of golden wheat, swaying like the sea. Farmer Ravi waved his sun-browned hand. “I grow the wheat that becomes your bread,” he smiled.

ILLUSTRATION PLACEHOLDER

Shopkeeper Meena hands warm bread to a customer in her colorful shop.

The wheat became flour, the flour became dough, and the dough became warm bread — sold with a smile by Shopkeeper Meena at her cheerful corner shop.

ILLUSTRATION PLACEHOLDER

Farmer Leela milks a content cow on a misty dairy farm.

Next, the coin glowed soft and white. They met Farmer Leela, gently milking her happy cows at sunrise, humming the very same tune as the coin.

ILLUSTRATION PLACEHOLDER

Driver Joseph waves from a big blue bus at a sunny stop.

Beep beep! The coin led them to the bus stop, where Driver Uncle Joseph steered carefully through busy streets, waving to every rider who climbed aboard.

ILLUSTRATION PLACEHOLDER

Teacher Fatima reads aloud to children in a warm library corner.

At the cozy library, Teacher Ms. Fatima turned the pages of a story, her voice making dragons roar and stars twinkle for every listening child.

ILLUSTRATION PLACEHOLDER

Tailor Suresh sews a yellow shirt at his machine, colorful fabric around him.

Tap-tap-tap went the sewing machine. Tailor Uncle Suresh stitched bright thread into soft cotton, humming happily as Milu's favorite yellow shirt slowly took shape.

ILLUSTRATION PLACEHOLDER

Doctor Ananya checks a teddy bear's heartbeat in a cheerful clinic room.

In a bright white room, Doctor Ananya gently listened to a teddy bear's heartbeat with her stethoscope, just like she cares for real, wiggly children.

ILLUSTRATION PLACEHOLDER

Builder Karim and his team stand proudly by the hospital's brick walls.

“I built these very walls,” laughed Builder Uncle Karim, tapping a brick with his hammer. “Brick by brick, with my whole team, we made this hospital strong.”

ILLUSTRATION PLACEHOLDER

A bright classroom full of singing, giggling children.

Back at Milu's own school, children sang and counted and giggled, while her teacher smiled, watering little minds like small important gardens.

ILLUSTRATION PLACEHOLDER

Builder Karim points proudly at the school's yellow and blue walls.

“This school too!” Builder Uncle Karim grinned, pointing at the sunny yellow walls. “Every brick was placed by hands that wanted you to learn and grow.”

ILLUSTRATION PLACEHOLDER

A vibrant fruit market stall with mangoes, Milu picking one out.

At the fruit market, Farmer Ravi's mangoes and Shopkeeper Meena's cheerful stall stood side by side — sweetness that took many hands to reach Milu's basket.

ILLUSTRATION PLACEHOLDER

All eight helpers gather around Milu and Pico in golden light.

Suddenly, every helper stood together — farmer, driver, teacher, tailor, doctor, builder, shopkeeper — smiling at Milu as the coin blazed brighter than the sun.

ILLUSTRATION PLACEHOLDER

Close-up: the glowing coin between Milu's cupped hands.

“Money isn't for buying,” the coin whispered warmly. “It's a little thank-you, passed from hand to hand, for all the ways people help each other.”

ILLUSTRATION PLACEHOLDER

Milu hugs the coin, dreamlike collage of the whole journey behind her.

Milu hugged the glowing coin close to her heart. Bread, milk, buses, books, shirts, hospitals, schools, fruit — all of it was really, truly, people helping people.

ILLUSTRATION PLACEHOLDER

Milu waves on a hilltop as golden light travels to each distant helper.

“Thank you!” Milu called to every helper, waving with both hands. Warm golden light bloomed around each one, like a hundred happy hugs.

ILLUSTRATION PLACEHOLDER

Milu hugs Mom and Dad in their warm, sunlit living room.

Home again, Milu tumbled into Mom and Dad's arms, words spilling out fast. "Everything we have," she said, "is because someone cared enough to help."

ILLUSTRATION PLACEHOLDER

Milu draws at a small table, finished drawings taped to the wall.

That evening, Milu drew pictures — a wheat field, a big yellow bus, a sewing machine — one thank-you drawing for every helper she'd met.

ILLUSTRATION PLACEHOLDER

Milu asleep in bed at night, the coin glowing softly on her pillow.

As stars filled the window, the coin's glow softened to a gentle whisper. Milu tucked it under her pillow, Pico curled beside her, both smiling sleepily.

ILLUSTRATION PLACEHOLDER

Extreme close-up on the coin's new glow beside Milu's sleepy, smiling face.

Just before sleep, the coin flickered once more. “Tomorrow,” it hummed softly, “let's discover where coins themselves come from...” Milu smiled. Another adventure was coming.

The Helping Chart

Can you remember who helped make each thing? Check the box once you spot each helper!

Object	Who Helped?	☐
Bread	Farmer & Shopkeeper	☐
Milk	Farmer	☐
Bus	Driver	☐
Book	Teacher	☐
Shirt	Tailor	☐
Hospital	Doctor & Builder	☐
School	Teacher & Builder	☐
Fruit	Farmer & Shopkeeper	☐

Say Thank You

PAGE 29

Think of someone who helps you and your family every day. Write (or ask a grown-up to help you write) a thank-you note, then draw them below.

Dear _____,

Thank you for _____.

Love, _____

Draw your helper here

Color It In!

PAGE 30

Help Milu Reach the Bakery!

HOME

BAKERY

Match the Helper to What They Made

Helper		What They Made
Farmer	• •	Bread / Fruit
Driver	• •	Bus Ride
Teacher	• •	Book
Tailor	• •	Shirt
Doctor	• •	Hospital Care
Builder	• •	School / Hospital

Draw a line connecting each helper to what they made.